

Otolith chemistry reveals the decline of wild fall-run salmon on the Feather River, California

“The rebound in salmon abundance suggests recovery after the stock collapse, but our otolith chemistry data show that wild fish have remained at record low numbers”

